Seaon Ducote'

Seaon Ducote' began her career in Fine Art in 1971, in Dallas, Texas. Early in her career she began experimenting with a variety of carefully researched paints and mediums, creating unusual special effects to add to her canvas creations. Her experimentation eventually led to a unique type of faux marbling, inspired by her two years of living in the mountain forest of Western Washington. Her tile designs display the organic movement seen in her close-up studies of stones and rain mixed with unusual plants on the forest floor.
